Store Manager Recalls Pearl Harbor Attack

Charles E. Markland, manager of the local McMahan Furniture Store, is quite certain he will be spending a more pleasant day today than he did nine years ago this date.

A look at the dateline of this newspaper would give a clue as to why Manager Markland feels the way he does. Today is December 7—the ninth anniversary of the fateful attack on Pearl Harbor.

It was just nine years ago today at 7:58 a. m. that Markland, then a sergeant with the Third Defense Battalion of the U.S. Marines, stood and watched what he and thousands of others on the island thought were our planes on a practice bombing mission.

Recalling the events of that day, Markland remembers the helpless feeling he and his buddies had as they attempted to down the attacking Japs with rifle fire.

"They were so low we could see the faces of the pilots," the local store manager remembers. "I don't suppose anybody will believe it, but I saw a buddy of mine lying in the truck ahead of ours which was bound for the Navy ammunition dump. A Jap plane strafed the truck and a row of bullets tore up the bed of the truck on either side of my buddy. He didn't even get a splinter."

Markland, who spent six years in the Marine Corps and saw 31 months overseas duty, recalls seeing the Japs hit the barracks at Hickam Field where most of the Army's Pilots were quartered.

"I don't know how many pilots we lost, but you can imagine that on 8 a. m. on a Sunday morning the barracks were loaded with men. After the bombs hit, there was pieces of barracks everywhere."

Markland, who lives at 1608 West 221st street, has some definite feelings about the A-bomb and what we should do about it. However, he chooses to remain mum on the subject.

"After all, there are some pretty smart men trying to decide what to do about the A-bomb, and if they can't figure it out I am sure that my opinion would do little to help solve the problem," he said.

Stevens Back From Confab

Due to return last Saturday from Houston, Texas, was City Manager George A. Stevens who left last Friday, November 24, to attend a four-day international convention of city managers.

Accompanying the city official was Mrs. Stevens.

Approximately 35 city managers from California were expected to attend the conference which started Sunday, November 24.

Adults Urged to Join New First Aid Class

A new free adult class in first aid will be held at the North Torrance Elementary School on Thursday afternoons from 3:45 to 5:45. The opening session of the class will be December 7, but will admit new students on December 14. All adults, regardless of residence, are invited to join this free class and receive an official Red Cross certificate upon completion.

This nine-week complete first aid course will place special emphasis on atomic and disaster first aid, but will include those ever-so-helpful everyday items of special importance—care of the children, treatment of shock, bruises, bites and cuts. Water safety will be discussed and, also, the important treatment of broken bones and bleeding.

Adults should go directly to class to register on Thursday afternoon at 3:45 at the North Torrance Elementary School.
